CAN'T EVEN TELL WHETHER BODY IS THAT OF WOMAN

Difficulty in Establishing Corpus Delicti in Crippen Case.

Coroner's Inquest is Postponed.

MAY BE DISGUISED IN DRESS.

London, July 18.—The coronial investigation into the death of the woman supposed to be Belle Elmore, was adjourned a month. Dr. Marshall, the police surgeon, caused a sensation, and assisted Dr. Pepper, who wore prolonged examination of the flesh failed to furnish tangible legal evidence that the body was even that of a woman. It is impossible to tell what caused her death. Legal authorities declare it impossible to convict Crippen unless Miss Leneve makes a statement or Crippen confesses.

Friends of Mrs. Crippen, in London, told the police that when Crippen was smooth shaven his wife once made him up as a woman at a dress ball. His effeminate figure and mannerisms caused him to so closely resemble a woman that intimate friends were unable to penetrate his disguise.

Police Inspector New had a conversation with Crippen before the discovery of the body. When questioned about his wife's whereabouts, Crippen said: "My wife threatened to run away with another man and I suppose she has done so."

Dew swore Crippen told him: "The man she intended to elope with was Bruce Miller, of Chicago."

Liners Searched.

New York, July 18.—Two Atlantic liners were searched today for Dr. Crippen. The Atlantic and Minnetonka passengers were scrutinized closely. Detectives were assisted by Madame Fred Ginnett and Mrs. B. Hyde, London friends of Belle Elmore, and Mrs. Louise Mills, her step-sister. They paid particular attention to female passengers on account of cables from London that Crippen may disguise himself as a woman. It is reported from London that Crippen and Miss Leneve disembarked from a channel steamer, Dieppe, for the train to Paris. It was not verified.

Miller Denies It.

Chicago, July 18.—Bruce Miller, named by Dr. Crippen to the London police before he fled, as the man with whom his wife said she intended to elope, denied the story today. He said he knew Mrs. Crippen some years ago. He had no intention of eloping with her.

The completed plant will cover a block of ground.

ELEVEN KILLED IN TRAIN WRECK

AUSTRALIA DISASTER OCCURS IN HEAVY FOG ON MAIN LINE.

Melbourne, Australia, July 18.—Eleven persons were killed and 68 injured in a collision with suburban train with the rear end of another train near here today. The collision occurred in a heavy fog. Specials with doctors and nurses were hurried to the scene. The killed and injured would have been greater but the trains were made of steel. The rear of the first train was crushed.

Lightning, Wind, Hail, Rain in Torrential Downpour Bring Death and Destruction to the Purchase

Two People in Graves County Are Killed and Several Buildings Struck....Crops Suffer Severely.

Louisville, Ky., July 18. (Special)—Reports from all over the state indicate the worst damage for many years by storms. Crops in many sections are ruined and lightning and wind and floods have caused big losses.

In Bourbon county, near Paris, lightning struck a country church just as the preacher was pronouncing the benediction. Two women were fatally injured. Others were shocked. The bluegrass and western Kentucky are the greatest sufferers from the rains. All small streams are booming.

Hawkinsville, Ky., July 18.—Fireman John Reynolds was killed, and several passengers slightly injured on the Louisville, Henderson and St. Louis train, wrecked by a landslide near here this morning. The locomotive and baggage car were swept from the tracks and carried 200 feet.

Lightning, rain, hail and wind played havoc in The Purchase yesterday.

Two deaths are reported from Graves county: Mrs. David Orr at Potosi, and Darrell Croley at Clear Springs.

An empty barn belonging to Mr. W. J. Penn, of LaCenter, was struck by lightning yesterday afternoon

MOLINE WHEEL CO. TO HAVE FACTORY IN MECHANICSBURG

Branch of Concern Will Employ Fifty Men at Opening of Works.

Purchases Property Along Tipple Track.

TO BEGIN WORK NEXT WEEK.

Property in Mechanicsburg was purchased this morning by the Mutual Wheel company, of Moline, Ill., for the erection of a permanent branch factory in this city. The new factory will be located on the tipple track near the Benton road, and will be completed as soon as possible. It is expected to begin work next week.

The main building of the new factory will be 40x40 feet and will be framed with a brick boiler room. The cost will be about $10,000 and when completed will enable the company to double the output of the present factory. The latest improved machinery will be installed. Between 30 and 50 men will be employed.

The Mutual Wheel company is a large company and has a number of branches located over the country. It manufactures spokes and does a large business. The company established a branch in Paducah January 1, and the business has been so good that the company found it necessary to erect a permanent building, and increase the output. Mr. George Bartholomew is the local manager of the company.

STANDING ARMY FOR PHILIPPINES

OPINION OF EXPERT THAT IT WOULD BE BEST FOR THE ISLANDERS.

Manila, July 18.—Dean Worcester professor of the University of Michigan, whom President McKinley named with J. G. Schurman; of Cornell, and Admiral Dewey and General Otis to work out a good form of government for Philippines, gives it as his opinion that peace on the islands will be best preserved by a large standing army.

PITTSBURGH FIRE IS SERIOUS IN RESULTS

Pittsburgh, July 18.—Eight persons, six of whom were firemen, were injured, and 26 houses were burned by a fire destroying a lumber company here today. The loss is $50,000.

Trouble in Louisiana.

Franklin, La., July 18.—Trouble is threatened today, following the outbreak last night. A mob of whites attacked officers in charge of four negroes at the railroad station at Rio, near here. One negro was shot to death and then hanged to a tree. Others escaped. The negroes of Rio, it is said, are preparing for trouble. A posse was sent from here. The negroes were arrested on a trivial charge and declared a drunken white man started the trouble.

Revolution in Spain Now Seems Certainty

San Sebastian, Spain, July 18.—Wealthy Spaniards are rushing here, owing to the dangerous outlook for a political revolution throughout Spain. The result of yesterday's meeting of Alfonso and members of his cabinet still is secret. There is good ground for belief that a military program was outlined to follow in case of an outbreak. Serious strikes at Barcelona, Bilbao, Cerona, Santander, Cigón and Saragossa are in progress. There is serious fighting and fatalities. Labor agitators are working for a general strike. Despite official denials, there is no doubt revolutionists nearly wrecked Alfonso's train near Villa Dolida last week.

Pennsylvania Railroad Strike Will Be Settled by Agreement at Conference Being Held Today

Announcement Made at Recess After Session Lasting Two Hours and Half--Details of Settlement Lacking.

Philadelphia, July 18.—When officials of the Order of Conductors and Trainmen went into conference with General Manager Myers, of the Pennsylvania, today, they admitted that the result hinged whether the threatened strike will be declared. They say the company misunderstand their attitude and they hope for a compromise. Falling, they say nothing will prevent a general strike. President Garretson and Lee of the Brotherhoods, are hopeful. They said they have good reason to believe they will find a basis on which both sides may agree.

A peaceful settlement of the dispute between the Pennsylvania railway and its conductors and trainmen will be effected late this evening or tomorrow, was the announcement made when the conference took a recess after two and a half hours' session.

Horse Jumps Overboard.

When the steamer Dick Fowler backed away from the wharfboat at 8:10 o'clock this morning and pointed her nose down stream, a blind bay horse leaped from the deck into the river and was afterwards rescued by deckhands. The animal and a buggy had been taken on the boat for shipment to Metropolis and the horse was unhitched from the rig, with his harness on. Just as the Fowler was getting under full power the horse rushed to the guard and jumped. Rising to the surface he swam around in a circle until reached by deckhands in a yawl. His head was held above the surface and he was towed to the foot of Jefferson street. The Fowler landed a short distance below and he was taken back on.

FREE-FOR-ALL FIGHT AT UNION STATION TODAY.

Patrolman C. D. Gilliam, of the Union station beat, swore out a warrant against S. P. Pool, in charge of the Palmer Transfer company's omnibus, and Louis Pollock and Abe Barnett, taxicab operators, charging them with engaging in a free-for-all fight at Union station. A fight ensued and Pool is said to have knocked Pollock down. It is charged that Pollock struck Pool in the head.

BRISTOW PLACED IN ANANIAS CLUB

JOE CANNON CARRIES WAR ON INSURGENTS INTO THEIR OWN COUNTRY.

Emporia, Kansas, July 18.—Senator Bristow, of Kansas, today, was passed as eligible for the Ananias club, by Speaker Cannon, who is here to make an address at the Emporia chautauqua this afternoon. He couldn't tell exactly what he was going to say "except that he was going to reply to Bristow's lie about Aldrich and trust." He seemed strong as ever, despite his heat prostration Saturday. "I am all right now," he said, "and have as much strength as I ever had. Why shouldn't I have been overcome by a large standing army."

GUY DEAN GIVEN HEARING BEFORE JUDGE BARKLEY

Circuit Court Decides He Has Exclusive Jurisdiction in Homicide Cases.

Special Term of Criminal Court.

Guy Dean, now in the county jail on the charge of murdering the unidentified youth on the Pool road, will receive another examining trial. This morning Circuit Judge William Reed heard the habeas corpus proceedings and decided that the examining trial in the city police court was not legal. Dean was brought into the court room, and County Jailer Houser was directed to take him back to the county jail until Saturday morning, when the examining trial will be held before County Judge Alben W. Barkley.

Section 3147 of the Kentucky statutes prescribes that the examining trials of all persons charged with homicides shall be before the county judge. Judge Reed said that he had investigated the law carefully and the statute is plain that the examining trials of murderers have been held in the city police court, but the habeas corpus proceedings which were brought by Attorney David Browning, who is attorney for Dean, will mean that all the future examining trials will be held before the county judge.

Separate examining trials will be held for Guy Dean and Tommy Parrin. Any time that Attorney S. H. Crossland asks for a new examining trial for Parrin it will be granted. The new examining trial of Dean will be held Saturday morning at 9 o'clock.

BEGIN FUTRELL TRIAL.

Judge Reed today called the trial of Louis and J. S. Furtrell for the killing of Horace Osburn, a Kentucky avenue boarding house keeper.

It is the second trial of Louis Furtrell, who did the killing. The defendants are father and son. They were ordered out of the house by Osburn and Osburn was killed.

READY FOR BUSINESS.

Only a short time was required this morning to dispose of the docket of the special criminal term of court. All of the 19 indictments against Hiram Smedley, former county court clerk, were continued, as he is in the state penitentiary serving a sentence, and it was agreed not to take up any more indictments at this term of court.

The trial of John Wiggins, colored, charged with the murder of Walter Scott, colored, was continued. Wiggins escaped from the county jail and he has never been recaptured.

Vann Redd, colored, will think twice before he escapes from the county jail again or else will travel so that he will never be brought back. This morning Redd was sentenced and pleaded guilty to a charge of jail breaking. The jury gave him a sentence of six months in the county jail. Last summer Redd was in the county jail on the charge of robbery, and escaped through a hole in the wall.

The trial of the suit of the Farmers' Union Produce company vs. the Illinois Central railroad was continued.

Sheriff George W. Houser, and Deputies C. J. Clark, H. B. Hill, and George E. Rouse were sworn.

The list of petit jurors were empanelled as follows: J. M. McIntosh, J. L. Bryan, W. R. Parker, O. F. Elliott, Linis Roof, George Langstaff, William Stanley, W. H. Patterson, F. G. Rudolph, T. F. Gaines, W. L. Yancey, V. H. Blewitt, V. Lee Bolon, F. M. Kelley, M. B. Tapp, Conrad Schmidt, J. D. Potter, Henry Counts, H. D. Turner, James McNeil, W. J. Miller, John Hughes, J. W. Boren, and John Pryor.

Noah Coffee Confesses

Noah Coffee, who was implicated in the robbery of J. W. Province's store at Gilbertsville July 3 by the confession of Ford Jackson here last week, confessed his guilt yesterday at the Marshall county jail at Benton. Sheriff Wallace telephoned C. P. of Police Henry Slugery and City Jailer James Clark that their presence there today at the trial would not be necessary. Jackson made the confession to the local authorities. Jackson will be returned to the McCracken county jail from Benton to go before the grand jury, while Coffe will begin his sentence at Benton.

Superior stickwork enabled Hopkinsville to win a six inning battle from Clarksville yesterday afternoon on the reservation of the Indians by score of 1 to 0. Throughout the game the leaders were completely at the mercy of Yon while Bailey was hit hard.

"He approached a bystander, shamefacedly, and muttered something. The man asked him to repeat it, and I heard the beggar say: "Please, sir, will you give me 10 cents for a bed?"

"Certainly, certainly," the man replied, taking a dime from his pocket. "Where is the bed?" —Boston Traveler.

Kersand's Minstrel Hard in Luck.

Billy Kersand's real negro minstrel show struck a bad row of stamps in Paducah Saturday night, and for a time it looked like the show might be tied up. Action was brought by Mary McMahon, of Chicago, alleging that $205 was due for a combination car. The trouble was settled by the payment of $25, the promise to pay $30 in Cairo Monday, and the guarantee that the remaining $150 would be paid in a month. The minstrel showed to a good crowd in Paducah.

league but the Hoptown batters had their eye on the ball.

The Night Riders started business in the first inning. Lyons flew out to McWilliams. Murray singled to left garden and Brown was safe at first on a wide throw by Heck that pulled Rainwater off the bag. Brown stole second. Russell rapped one to right field and Murray scored. Brown tried to score but was caught at the home pan. Smith ended the inning by going out, Heck to Rainwater.

The second inning was without incident but in the third Bailey pulled out of a hole. Lyons was first up and singled to center. Murray made a neat sacrifice, Rainwater to McCance. Brown drove one past second, but was thrown out, Bailey to McCance, try to steal second. Russell hit a safe one to center and stole second, but was left on the bag when Gruesser struck out.

Yon opened up the fifth inning for Hoptown with a near single to left. Lyons beat out an infield hit, but the two runners were left as Murray, Brown and Russell were easy outs. The sixth inning was without incident although Mercer walked. Although not counted in the summary because the inning was not finished, Lyons drove one to the score board for two bases.

While the Moguls were fattening batting averages at the expense of Bailey, the volunteers were going down in order. The fact that only 18 batters in sixth innings faced Yon is evidence of his ruling the game. In the first and second innings the Tennesseeans were retired on infield hits. In the third Rainwater hit to right field a single, but was caught trying to steal second. In the fourth after McWilliams and McCance had fanned, Laftner was safe on a bobble by Lyons, but he died on first as Shinn flew out to Lyons. It was the only inning that over three batters faced Yon. In the fifth and sixth Clarksville went down quickly. For Clarksville in the seventh McCance was first up and he was given free transportation. Before Laftner reached the plate Umpire Piepho called time as the rain descended in sheets.

CANNON HAS RECOVERED

MAY CURTAIL TALKS IF HE FINDS STRENGTH FAILING.

Speaker Declares That He Will Fight as Hard as He Can for Congressman Miller

IS HONEST AND SQUARE MAN

Winfield, Kan., July 18.—Despite the fact that he was overcome by the heat here, Joseph G. Cannon, speaker of the house of representatives, was felling as vigorous as ever and despite the advice of friends, determined to begin tomorrow a series of political speeches in the Fourth Kansas congressional district.

"Uncle Joe," however, qualified his announcement that he would keep his speaking engagements by saying that he would not attempt to fill all the speaking dates if he suffered from the heat during his speech at Emporia tomorrow afternoon. In fact, to conserve his strength, he may curtail his Emporia speech to about 45 minutes.

Congressman Miller of the Fourth district, Speaker Cannon said to the Associated Press today, "is sick and unable to wage the campaign in his district that he desires. He asked me to help him and I want to do it, for he is an honest congressman and a square man."

Mr. Cannon is scheduled to speak at Emporia Monday afternoon, at Burlington Monday night, at Herington Tuesday afternoon, and at Marion Tuesday night. These are all the speaking engagements he now has in Kansas.

Last night was cool and Speaker Cannon slept well despite his unpleasant experience in the afternoon, when he was temporarily overcome by heat while addressing a chautauqua assembly.

He was driven in an automobile last night to Arkansas City, where he made an open air political speech. As he expressed it, he "began at Arkansas City, where he left off at Winfield."

COTTON IN NEED OF CULTIVATION

MANY LOWLANDS IN VALLEY CAN NEVER BE REDEEMED.

BRIGHTER PROSPECTS IN EAST.

Memphis, July 18.—There was an improvement in the cotton crop during the week in Alabama and states eastward and in Texas and Oklahoma. Elsewhere little or nothing was gained because showers were general and kept labor from the fields for the greater part of the time. It seems certain that in the valley states many lowlands can never be redeemed from the grass. In Mississippi some of the bottoms are still under water, which is receding very slowly.

The great need of the crop in the central and eastern belts is cultivation. There are a few localities that have not suffered severely either because the lands were unusually well drained or because the rains were not

CHILDREN'S ILLS IN SUMMER

The hardest period of a child's life is during the heated term. It is then that the little men and women become so subject to stomach and bowel troubles. With one it manifests itself in the form of obstinate constipation, with another the very reverse—diarrhea. One is as bad and as dangerous as the other. Constipation makes the child lose appetite and sleep, makes it languid and sickly-looking. Diarrhea weakens it and destroys appetite and energy. Piles, pimples, eruptions, itch, worms, etc., follow in the train until many a mother feels that her child is indeed very ill. But these are all troubles that can be easily cured. The child needs a few doses of a remedy like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepson, the grand laxative and tonic. Parents can make no possible mistake by giving it Syrup Pepson, as the chances are always in favor of the child needing a laxative. It is sold in two sizes, 50 cents and $1.00, and any druggist can supply you. It cannot be mentioned too strongly that parents should look closely after the welfare of the children during the hot months. excessive, but as a rule all the territory east of Texas and Oklahoma has been seriously damaged. For the crop to recover, dry weather is necessary. The plant is late and has not set fruit as usual at this date.

Within the past four weeks North Carolina and Tennessee have suffered less than other states east of the Mississippi river. Reports from Oklahoma are brilliant and good from Texas except in the southwest, where rain is beginning to be needed, the recent showers having failed to reach that section.

Sixteenth Century Inns.

Supervision over the inns was far stricter than at present, especially in Italy. At Lucca and at Florence all the inns were in a single street, and in many towns the new arrival was taken before the authorities by the guard at the gates before he was allowed to choose his inn, to which he would be conducted by a

The Cost of Living.

A young lady who taught a class of small boys in the Sunday school desired to impress on them the meaning of returning thanks before a meal. Turning to one of the class, whose father was a deacon in the church, she asked him:

"William, what is the first thing your father says when he sits down to the table?"

"He says, 'Go slow with the butter, kids; it's 40 cents a pound,'" replied the youngster.—Everybody's Daily Thought.

We do not count a man's years until he has nothing else to count.—Emerson.

Joe Cannon would not have anyone believe he fell victim to the psychic influence of the Insurgent movement in Kansas.

Deputy Marshal Elwood Neel has been chasing snakes out of the bootlegging district so assiduously, it is not surprising that one should turn on him occasionally.

When Peary reached the north pole, he writes, "It seemed commonplace." That after 25 years of suffering hardship and deprivation to attain it. Many a man has sacrificed everything that goes to make life sweet and pleasant and death beautiful to find just what Peary found, when he got what he wanted.

There are 745,735 school children in Kentucky, for whom $3,063,159.18 will be distributed among the school districts of the state. Had that million and a half dollars paid to the state by the government for old war claims during the last administration, been set aside to endow the state school fund with its income, instead of going for the retirement of outstanding bonds and the first payment on the capital, $65,000 more annually might have been spent on the schools.

President Taft has withdrawn 71,158.86 acres of coal land from settlement since congress enacted the law, authorizing executive withdrawals, and has sent the attorney general and secretary of commerce and labor to Alaska to investigate the situation there. That ought to convince even the yellow magazines, which are sorely responsible for the proposed increase in postal rates on their heavy advertising pages, that the president is a sincere conservationist.

JOHN R. PURYEAR.

Until the dawn of the peaceful Sabbath morning, the spirit of John R. Puryear lingered amid the familiar scenes among the loved ones of his earthly habitation; then winged its way gently into that realm to which all that is immortal is bound. It was a fitting end to a life, dignified by a consistent regard for the laws of the Kingdom. In the death

GREAT NEWSPAPER BEAT

The Fourth Estate, the leading magazine for newspaper men, publishes the following story of how the United Press association, which furnishes the telegraphic news service for The Evening Sun, beat all competitors in handling the report of the fight at Reno:

"The man who conceived this idea of instantaneous transmission to all points and set it as the ideal was Roy W. Howard, general news manager of the United Press. His right hand man, who was to overcome the mechanical difficulties, was J. J. Rafter, superintendent of telegraph. Howard went to the scene and arranged all the immediate preliminaries. Rafter took a midway station at Chicago. He picked for important places at the keys and typewriters on the big trunk lines of the association the best operators in its employ. Howard ordered the installation of visible typewriters at all relay points, and to this as much as to any one other factor was due the remarkable speed attained in forwarding the report across the continent and to the Atlantic cable, to San Francisco, up and down the Pacific coast and to Australia. As each word was recorded at a relay point it was clicked off by the sending operator seated behind him.

"Months ago the management of the United Press decided to win this news contest if possible. It fully appreciated the power of resources of its rivals, and reckoned that they would be just as determined. It assigned to the fighters' camps two of its best men, both of them not only experts in the fighting game, but all-around news men—Max Balthasar ('Ringsider') and George Pulford ('Tip Wright'). To these men was given not only the assignment of covering the daily doings of the two pugilists, but also of laying preliminary lines for the big beat—if it could be done.

"No matter how expert and speedy the men at the ringside might be, however, their efforts would prove unavailing without prompt handling of their product all along the line. There were matters of wires, routes, repeaters and relays to be considered.

"Early in the campaign a standard of efficiency in the production of the story and its transmission was fixed. The report from the ringside to the most distant client should be instantaneous. If not, the nearest to this that could be approached. Never before had it been deemed possible for a press association to transmit for a continuous hour a running story over a stretch of 3,500 miles of wire, with hundreds of clients intervening, and deliver it to terminal points coincidentally with the actions described.

"This, however, was what the United Press set out to do. The result was almost as astonishing to the men who conceived the idea as it was to the editor up in Toronto who sat at his desk reading about the blows the black man landed on Jen fifteen seconds after the thud was heard in the arena at Reno.

"Never before in the history of prize fighting and newspapers had the flash of a result been received by the clients of a press association during the description of the round in which the finish occurred. In this instance nearly half the description of John R. Puryear civic life in Paducah loses a factor that has always been employed on the side which most clearly claimed the virtues of morality and purity. John R. Puryear was a Christian gentleman, earnest, sincere, militant. He made no compromise of conviction; he held the respect of those who disagreed with him. His was not a colorless life. He interested himself in politics and was honored by high places in the councils of his party. As a churchman he was active until his last illness laid him low. He was a man of vigorous mentality and physical endurance, and his clean life told in his last moments, when tenacious vitality battled for hours against the inexorable decree of death.

For 41 years he was clerk of the United States court, discharging the duties of that office with so much dispatch and accuracy as to win the appreciation of the court and bar of the state. Though old in years, as men reckon time, and in the service, as clerk, he strove as hard for a record in official well doing, as he did at his first term. It was thus he maintained his youth while life lasted.

Oh That Mine Enemy Would Write a Book!

Mr. Archibald Robertson Dunlap, editor of the Frankfort News, says the writer is subject to some criticism for his connection with the Lexington Herald since Editor Breckinridge has announced that he will not support Mr. Cantrell for congress. The man who appropriates to himself most of the credit—discredit would be better—of defeating Governor Beckham for the United States senate has an over-supply of effrontery to speak of bolters and boiters in any other way but in humiliation. He seems to have forgotten that we were on the ground during that memorable contest and how we scored him rally for his misleading and falsely based letters to the Courier-Journal.—W. P. Amenities in the 'Leventh.

In the Eleventh congressional district race for the Republican nomination, D. C. Edward's supporters have called Caleb Powers a thief and a murderer. The Somerset Re-publican retorts:

"When W. O. Bradley, regularly nominated for United States senator by the Republicans of the state, was engaged in fighting ex-Governor J. C. W. Beckham, Democratic nominee for that honor. Who were Beckham's warmest supporters? Don C. Edwards, candidate for renomination to congress by the Republicans of the Eleventh district; Richard P. Ernst, the one-time traitorous chairman of the Republican state central committee, who stood as close, perhaps, to Beckham as any of the latter's Democratic supporters; Richard W. Knott, whose Evening Post threw its every support on editorial page and in news columns to Beckham; Marshal Bullitt, ex-Democrat, who during senatorial contest visited Frankfort and worked on Republican legislators to desert Bradley and elect Beckham. Would our own J. Sherman Cooper or B. J. Burthum have shed any tears over Bradley's defeat? Are they today friends or foes of Bradley? Everyone knows that there is not a bone of Bradley's political body that they would not grind to powder."

CRAP SHOOTERS

DOZEN OF THEM ROUNDED UP BY POLICE.

Sixth and Campbell Streets Scene of the Game—Police Court Docket.

Just exactly one dozen crap shooters, all colored, were rounded up at 2 o'clock Sunday morning by the police and a crap game that is said to have been running nearly every night near the Illinois Central freight house, Sixth and Campbell streets, has been broken up, for a while, at any rate.

Police Sergeant Lige Cross heard of the game and had been spying several night, but failed to see any. Saturday night some one tipped off the game, that was going on in full force, and accompanied by Patrolmen Kirk, Mitchell, Dunaway and Garrett they tiptoed to the scene.

At the sign from Sergeant Cross the patrolmen rushed in on the gamblers, who surrendered at the point of guns. They were taken to police headquarters in the patrol wagon and some gave bond, the others spending the night and yesterday in jail. This morning every one pleaded guilty and were fined $20 each. They were: Henry Grove, Clint Reiley, Horace Beasley, Eugene West, Ed Hobbs, Clarence Trice, Henry Clark, Wayne Johnson, Mack Young, John Sipe, Jim Hawkins and James Gray.

Police Sergeant Lige Cross, Ed. Dollett and Bob Smith, the latter colored, pleaded guilty to sleeping in a box car and were fined $5 apiece.

The case against Mack Riley, colored, charged with malicious shooting without wounding, was continued to Thursday. Riley is accused of shooting in a colored restaurant at 107 South First street,

Saturday night. No one was struck by the shot, which Riley claims was accidentally discharged.

LICENSED MENTAL HEALERS.

Washington First State to Recognize Mental Science.

"Prof. M. F. Knox, of Bryn Mawr, Wash., has just achieved a most important forward step for new thought," says the Nautilus. "Through the persistent efforts of Prof. Knox, extending over several years, legal recognition has been given mental science practitioners in the state of Washington."

A law was passed early in 1909 giving authority to license mental science healers who were graduates of a legally incorporated college teaching mental science. The privilege of license was also to be extended to all others who had practiced mental science healing for two years prior to that time in the state of Washington.

"Those who came within the terms of the act might be licensed with all the privileges of practicing mental science methods which the regular physicians enjoy in the practice of medicine. The medical board whose duty it was to grant the licenses at first ignored all applications of mental science healers under the new law. The matter was carried into the courts and the board of examiners was finally forced to grant the permission to mental scientists to practice healing as provided by the new law. In the state of Washington mental science healers are now on a par with the regular M. D.'s and osteopaths in that state."

A Punctureless Tire.

The United States consul at Leeds reports a punctureless automobile tire, composed of heavy canvas lining packed with the puncture-proof material placed between the outer cover and the inner air tubes of the ordinary pneumatic tire. The lining is so made as to cause a low pressure on the tread and to equalize the pressure on the inner air tube. A tire was tested after beingashed and cut on the outer cover. It went 500 miles without puncture or repair.

SITUATION IS MORE FAVORABLE

REGARDING CROPS IN GENERAL

CORN IN PARTICULAR.

Dull Season and Period of Suspense With All Eyes on the Farms.

HENRY CLEW'S WEEKLY LETTER

New York, July 18. (Special)—We are now entering what is usually the dull season in the stock market owing to the vacation period, and a disposition to await more definite prospects concerning the growing crops. The situation of the latter is more favorable than has been generally represented. Warm weather and beneficial rains during the past week have materially benefited both wheat and corn. The shrinkage in spring wheat, estimated at about 90,000,000 bushels, was, of course, an unpleasant factor. Thanks to the larger acreage of winter wheat and generally fair condition this loss may be partly recovered. Something of vastly more importance is the prospect for corn, which is very encouraging, the outlook being for a record breaking crop of 3,200,000,000 bushels or over. Since the money value of the corn crop is between two or three times that of wheat, the importance of a big yield of corn can easily be understood. Last year our corn crop of 2,272,000,000 bushels was valued at $1,653,000,000. Our wheat crop of 737,000,000 bushels was valued at $730,000,000, while our cotton crop of a little more than 10,000,000 bales was valued at $850,000,000; an unusually high figure. It will thus be seen that corn is worth more than the other two crops combined, and twice as much as either one of them. A big corn crop therefore, such as now promised, affords a most important basis of encouragement. It should cheapen meat products, and give the railroads a large freight traffic. But the crop has still several weeks to run, and is always exposed to danger from early frost. Moreover, August is usually a month of deterioration for the majority of crops, so that while damage reports have been exaggerated, there is no reason for indulging in any undue optimism. Some disappointment will be felt at our failure to raise other large crops, because the country really needed a big surplus, not only to facilitate lower prices at home, but also to afford the desired stimulus to exports. During the coming year we may ship comparatively little wheat to Europe, but a liberal increase can be anticipated in exports of cotton. The wheat crop outlook has improved due to recent rains. Our crop yields are now pretty sure to reach in value between $8,000,000,000 and $9,000,000,000. If so, continued prosperity for the coming year will be assured and in the event of no foreign complications the country will be safe and the good dividend paying stocks will advance from the present low level.

Stocks.

The outlook for the stock market is still somewhat confused. Securities during the last six months have undergone a tremendous shrinkage. Discounting in advance the depression in trade and industry which is now foreseen. The stock exchange also discounts such conditions in advance, and then starts out to anticipate business improvement while business is still passing through the midst of depression. One reason for such an anomaly is that money at one time required for legitimate business operations subsequent finds more profitable employment in cheap securities. For investors the present's unquestionably an attractive opportunity, because many sound dividend payers are selling below intrinsic values, considering monetary conditions. But caution must still be used in all speculative operations, though it might also prove entirely lacking, confidence has received hard blows, and the weak pots have not yet been entirely eliminated. There is a bear party also of considerable influence which might succeed in forcing the market lower, though it might also prove in element of strength in event of forced recovery. A conservative policy, therefore, is still the only one to be followed, and the prudent operator will be satisfied for the time being with moderate profits.

HENRY CLEW'S WEEKLY LETTER

tion is too big to permit of hasty action. It will probably require several months of investigation before any fair decision can be attained, and it is altogether premature to assume that such action will be unfavorable to the railroads. That the commissioners have made concessions to the railroads in the matter of commutation rates is proof that they are not animated by any spirit of unfairness or antagonism; yet they may not be proof against political influence which will certainly be brought to bear.

Business.

The general business situation is not satisfactory. Reactionary tendencies multiply, and the liquidation which has taken place on the stock exchange is now extending to the commodity markets. Economy is becoming the order of the day, having been rendered imperative by the extravagance which has permeated all classes of consumers for some years past. What with automobiles and other inordinate indulgences, the buying power of many people has been, at least temporarily, impaired. A period of rest is needed for recuperation. A good many failures have taken place during the past six months, and more are to be anticipated. Lower prices for commodities, however, and time for recuperation will gradually work out a better and sounder situation. Labor is still generally well employed and securing good wages; so that there should be no serious abatement in the consumption of necessities. Luxuries only should suffer. Should the crops turn out satisfactory, and should the country escape any unfavorable political developments, we may look for a resumption of trade activity next fall and winter. Disappointment, however, in either of these respects would inevitably affect trade injuriously; hence a period of caution and waiting is necessary, until the possible outcome of these elements can be fairly estimated.

STATEWIDE ISSUE IS BEFORE TEXAS

CANDIDATES FROM GOVERNOR TO CONSTABLE ARE UP.

Culberson Is Unopposed—Three or Four Gubernatorial Entries Against Prohibition.

PRIMARIES COME SATURDAY.

Dallas, Tex., July 18.—Statewide prohibition is the leading issue in a campaign now on in the Democratic party of Texas to select nominees for all state offices from governor down to constable. Primaries will be held on July 23, with about 180 candidates to be voted on, a number unusually large in the big Lone Star state. In addition, instructions will be given for United States senator for the term beginning March 4, 1911, and Senator Charles A. Culberson is without opposition for re-election to this office.

Nomination will be equivalent to election except in two or three legislative districts, and the candidate receiving the highest number of votes becomes the nominee.

The activities of certain men of high political standing have added to the campaign important features other than prohibition. The attitude of United States Senator Jos. W. Bailey is being generally watched because of his influence it may have on his fortunes when he becomes a candidate for re-election two years from now.

Johnson for Prohibition.

About two years ago Mr. Bailey announced that he favored the existing local option system and was opposed to statewide prohibition. In speeches since congress adjourned Senator Bailey has given his support to Judge William Poindexter for governor on the grounds of friendship. Judge Poindexter favors the amendment of the constitution to prohibit liquor traffic, but opposes a statutory statewide prohibition act as being unconstitutional.

There are four candidates for governor, the other three being: Cone Johnson, Oscar B. Colquitt and R. V. Davidson.

Mr. Johnson favors statewide prohibition. He has announced that if the next legislature refuses to submit a prohibition constitutional amendment for popular decision he will attempt to have the legislature pass statewide prohibition statute.

Governor Campbell's View.

Mr. Colquitt opposes statewide prohibition and also is against submission of the amendment unless two-thirds of the districts shall instruct for it in the primaries. Many of Senator Bailey's friends are supporting Mr. Colquitt. He is a member of the state railroad commission.

Mr. Davidson resigned the office of attorney general to make the race on his record as a trust prosecutor. He opposes prohibition, but favors submitting the amendment because of the demands for it which Democratic voters made two years ago.

Gov. Campbell has added a dash of excitement to the campaign by calling a special session of the legislature to meet four days before the primaries, and letting it be known that in event of Mr. Colquitt's nomination he will ask the legislature to call a constitutional convention, the significance of this move being that the convention can be called by a simple majority of the legislative, whereas a constitutional amendment requires a two-thirds vote for submission. The governor is understood to favor any of the candidates except Mr. Colquitt, who has bitterly assailed the present administration.

Will Vote on Submission.

In the primaries the voters will have the opportunity to vote for submission or "against submission."

Ten of the present Democratic congressmen are unopposed in the primaries. Congressmen Randell, Beall, Gillespie, Stephens and Gregg have opposition. For the unexpired term of Gordon Russell, who recently resigned to accept a federal judgeship, there are four candidates and also four others for the next regular term in that district.

The other parties will hold precinct conventions on July 23. The Republican party's probable nominee for governor is J. O. Ferrell, of San Antonio, a well known Democrat. Two years ago another Democrat, John N. Simpson, of Dallas, was the Republican gubernatorial nominee.

She Couldn't Understand.

Out in Edgewater there is a man who has worn a serious look since his little daughter perched on his knee the other evening asked:

"Papa, was it a wise person who said, 'The good die young.'"

"Yes," he replied, "I suppose he must have been very wise."

"Well," the child replied, after thinking it over for a minute, "I'm not so much surprised about you, but I don't see how mamma ever managed to get growed up."—Chicago Record-Herald.

CHAPTER VI.

ESPIRE his fifty odd years, Colonel Moreau set out for his destination at so vigorous a pace that Tom Randall, who confidently expected to dog the other's steps, was disagreeably disappointed, for by the time he had gained the first corner around which the estimable defender of the family had disappeared the latter was nowhere in sight. Familiar with the city and its environs, the boy possessed knowledge of several time saving short cuts to the dueling oaks, but this on the present occasion he considered useless, for ignorant of the exact spot where the combatants were to meet, there existed no alternative but to press on in the wake of Moreau, who he had every reason to believe had taken the familiar and direct route. Thoroughly imbued with the desire and expectation of witnessing Kirby's death and thus in a measure glutting his vengeance, young Randall broke into a run, confident that on turning each successive corner he would come in sight of the serene and indomitable colonel. But time and distance flew by until at length the tall trees bordering the grove broke upon his vision, and as yet his quarry had not been run to earth.

Momentarily perplexed and mystified, the boy turned and scanned the way by which he had come. Could he have in some cryptic manner passed the other on the road, or, contrary to all expectation, had Moreau taken the short cut, and was he even now in the grove face to face with Cameo Kirby? For immediate and conclusive answer two pistol shots rattled out, shattering the cool serenity of the morning and sending a bevy of frightened rooks circling and cawing high into the brooding blue dome of the heavens. Cursing his ill luck, young Randall raced furiously toward the distant grove.

Colonel Moreau, considerably more familiar with the town than Tom Randall, had indeed availed himself of the shortest cut possible and one which would lead him directly to that entrance the situation of which Larkin Bunce had been at pains to explain. No time could be wasted, for Kirby was already there, and to keep an adversary waiting smacked not only of cowardice, but was a direct breach of the code regulating such affairs of honor. It was characteristic of Moreau that if left to himself he would serenely outrage all codes by shooting a man in the back, but that when officially entered for a combat—such as on the present occasion—he punctiliously observed both the spirit and the letter.

Kirby living meant a serious menace; Kirby dead meant security and a tighter grip on the spoils of the river, a reoccupation of the premier position from which he had been ousted. Business interests and his own life clamored for Kirby's death. For Bunce, if he grew troublesome, he would account, and he could rely on the latter's remaining true to the code of their profession—carrying no tales to the Randsells, but instead, if he considered fit, fighting out the issue with the slayer of his partner. It can thus be seen that Moreau in his usual optimistic fashion had the future arranged entirely to his satisfaction.

Meanwhile he had cautiously entered the shadow of the dueling oaks and, pistol in hand, was slowly threading his way down the path, the weapon cocked and resting across his left forearm. Flanked on either side by the giant trees through which fugitive sunbeams flickered, shooting their small golden arrows of light into the dense and rank undergrowth, he found some difficulty in accurately discerning distant objects. Although the path was straight, thus obviating any turning of angles and a consequent sudden and unexpected meeting, he could not see Kirby, and for a moment the fears of an elaborately planned ambuscade arose in his unworthy mind. Indeed, the setting offered many inducements to one who, like himself, might entertain such a laudable purpose.

These momentary misgivings were, however, abruptly dispelled, for from far down the path Kirby's voice suddenly broke the silence:

"Good morning, colonel! Is that you? Are you quite ready? Stand by, for I'm coming!"

Moreau instantly turned until he faced the trees on his right. Thus he presented the smallest possible surface to his advancing foe. Although the articles of agreement called for a mutual and simultaneous advance, he was aware that it is easier to fire from a fixed platform, and he consequently deliberately halted, his left shoulder thrown forward and the pistol level with his eye. He could now discern Kirby, who, unmindful of all tactical or strategic advantage, came sauntering toward him, the right hand dangling carelessly at his side. He was whistling, but had Moreau been nearer he would have noted the sinister line running from nose to mouth and the sly purpose in the brooding eyes, all of which belied the cheery carol.

Moreau, standing like a rock which disputed the other's progress, waited and watched. Once he made a sudden drawing, malarial gentleman—was cast in a more determined and heroic mold. "Yuh all be the gambler they call Cameo Kirby," he exclaimed, pointing a threatening finger. "We seen yuh all come from the duelin' oaks, an' we all have just come from there. Yuh all have killed an unarmed man, an' we all are goin' to have yuh all up for murder."

He had hardly resumed possession of his father's weapon and thus cast the stigma of murder upon Kirby when several men, attracted by the shots and whose rapid approach had spurred the boy to instant action, came running into the grove. To them young Randall breathlessly recounted his version of the tragedy. "You see, the gentleman has no weapon," he concluded, pointing to Moreau's barren hands. "This, therefore, is a deliberate and carefully planned murder. Like yourselves, I was attracted by the shot."

"But there was two of 'em, for I counted," put in one of the newcomers.

"The murderer evidently missed at his first fire," said Tom. "My name is Randall of Plaquemine, so you may accept by word that I found the gentleman as I have stated. This is a great and villainous outrage. I happen to know the victim, a most estimable and honorable gentleman, who had the misfortune to incur the enmity of the notorious river gambler Cameo Kirby. The latter swore to get even, and there is no doubt he has fulfilled his murderous and cowardly intention."

"I seen this Kirby in town yesterday," commented one of the men, examining with morbid curiosity Moreau's death wound. "He's a bad egg from all accounts. Done his job neat. Shot from ambush. I reckon."

"We passed him on the road as we come into the grove," added a second. "I know him by sight—a young looking, gray eyed blade with a sort of dandy getup to him. We asked him if there had been a doocie, and he said yes, he thought so!"

"He lies as you can see!" cried Tom, springing to his feet. "What road did he take?"

"He come from that a-way," interrupted the informant, pointing in the direction Kirby had taken. "But you all know the road forks farther down."

"Come! We'll separate, and he cannot escape!" cried Tom. "It's our duty to hunt the villain down, to aid the law all we can. Dueling is one thing, but murder such as this deserves only lynch law. Well show the scoundrel the same quality of mercy he meted out to this poor defenseless gentleman."

"That's right. Short shrift and a long rope!" cried the men.

Piloted by the member who had met Kirby, the small impromptu posse quickly made its way through the underbrush, emerging on the road which the gambler, at a point below the fork, was even then traversing. When the fork of the road was reached Tom and two companions chose the right or southerly branch, while the man who had met Kirby, accompanied by a half grown youth, bore away to the left. Thus by another intervention of the fates young Randall's meeting with the gambler was again postponed. The former and his companions, alarming the countryside en route, reached town without overtaking or even sighting their quarry.

Meanwhile the other members of the posse had fared better—or worse.

Kirby had not long left their companions before Kirby was sighted, walking leisurely with bowed head and evidently preoccupied mind. Warned by the rapidly advancing steps of his self constituted judges and executioners, he turned in mild curiosity and awaited their approach.

The farmer and his son—for such was the relationship existing between this contingent of the pursuers—came up hot and panting from their exertions and, meeting Kirby's cool and pleasantly inquiring eyes, became for the moment nonplussed and confused.

"Rather a warmish morning for such strenuous exercise, gentlemen," greeted the gambler. "It is obvious that your business is with me. Pray in what manner can I serve you?"

The youth's loutish bearing became the more evident in contradistinction to that of the elegant and courteous

True to his class, Kirby's opponent possessed some knowledge of wrestling, but was totally ignorant of even the rudiments of pugilism, and the younger man confined his efforts to frustrating tripping attacks while at the same time striving to free his pinned right arm. This at length he succeeded in doing. A vicious wrench, a clever feint, a smashing uppercut, and the malarial gentleman went down on his back while Kirby, waving an airy adieu to the now advancing army of yelling pursuers, took nimbly to his heels.

But, fleet and long wended runner though he was, capture was not thus to be lightly outfoxed. The cry of "Catch the murderer!" is infinitely more potent than that of "Stop thief!" and pursuers were multiplying in his track at an alarming rate, adding at every step fresh runners to their ranks.

Sped Kirby, every variety and class of humanity at his heels. Once or twice his way was barred by some energetic and inquisitive newcomer, but a clever dodge or a well directed blow left him to swell the ever increasing army of impotents in the rear. No fox doubling and redoubling on his tracks while in full view of the pack owned a more keen delight in thus staking acumen and agility against overwhelming odds than did the young gambler. By now the city proper had been gained, and the pursued, dashing around the first opportune corner, became lost to his pursuers.

Kirby found himself in a quiet side street lined with aristocratic, fat little red brick houses whose drawing room balconies were little more than a man's height from the side path. He vaguely realized that he was in the heart of New Orleans' old French quarter. The street was not very long, and he did not know to where it led. Owing to the early hour the shutters of the houses were still closed, but one house seemed to be an exception, for his quick, searching eyes noted on his right a half open drawing room window with its gently flapping curtain.

He had dropped into a quick walk in order to gain a much needed breathing spell, but now as the hue and cry of his persistent pursuers became more insistent he again broke into a run. In a few moments they would turn the corner and sight their quarry. Almost at the same instant another chorus of cries came from the far end of the street toward which Kirby was hastening. He incontinently halted, realizing that the enemy, familiar with the neighborhood, had divided his army and sent one contingent around his flank to hem him off. He was trapped, for it was impossible to advance or retreat. Louder and louder sounded the cries from front and rear. An paces, and a sudden throb of flame leaped from Moreau's pistol, followed by a whirling wreath of smoke and a reverberating crash. He reeled from the heavy charge. At the same moment Kirby's listless hand swept up, and without breaking step he fired.

The drifting smoke parted in shreds and streamed away. The startled crowd had ceased cawing, and off somewhere a bluejay vented to timidly call its mate. Once more the cool serenity had descended upon the dueling oaks. Kirby was still advancing, but Colonel Moreau, giving a little cough, hesitated a moment, then fell prone, a small blue indentation disfiguring the purity of his lofty forehead.

Cameo Kirby looked gravely down upon the body of his late enemy; then as gravely he parted the trees and, with bowed head, slowly threaded his way toward the distant town.

Kirby had not long left the scene of conflict before Tom Randall, coming from an almost diametrically opposite direction, burst into the grove and tripped headlong over the lifeless form of Colonel Moreau. Recovering himself, the boy stared in horrified amazement at what he had never expected to see. That God should have thus defended the impious seemed impossible. Astonishment quickly gave place to a sense of burning outrage, a bitterness, abhorrence and vindictiveness which immeasurably overswept all previous feelings of treasured animosity and hatred. Now, Kirby must stone not only for the suicide of John Randall, but for the death of that gentleman's fancied protector and champion.

Swayed by his present emotions, balked of revenge and thirsting for some means of expressing it, young Randall now stooped to an action which dishonored his name, race and country. In cooler moments he would have repudiated an action which forfeited the respect of all decent men. But he was hostage to a tempestuous and violent passion which counted not the means to an end. Single handed he might not hope to hunt down Kirby, but if he could enlist the assistance of the authorities, make every man the gambler's enemy, the latter's capture would be assured.

With difficulty loosening Moreau's fast stiffening fingers from their death grip upon the pistol, young Randall hastily concealed the weapon upon his person and thus by a single movement transformed what had been an honorable and fair encounter into a seemingly deliberate and cold blooded murder. The fact that Moreau had used the late John Randall's weapon, leaving his own at Mine Davezac's, would be additional proof that Cameo Kirby had shot down an unarmed man. But one living witness other than Tom Randall had been present at this exchange of weapons, and he, Aaron, would be expected to keep silent. Revenge, may it ever be honorable, but honorable or dishonorable, revenge at all costs—such was the boy's slogan.

He had hardly resumed possession of his father's weapon and thus cast the stigma of murder upon Kirby when several men, attracted by the shots and whose rapid approach had spurred the boy to instant action, came running into the grove. To them young Randall breathlessly recounted his version of the tragedy. "You see, the gentleman has no weapon," he concluded, pointing to Moreau's barren hands.

FOUNTAIN AVENUE PROPERTY HOLDERS—NOTICE ABOUT IMPROVEMENTS.

The law under which Paducah is now operating in the improvement of its streets, permits property holders abutting the improvement to pay the special assessments for the improvement in installments of ten per cent of the special taxes assessed every year for ten years. It becomes necessary, though, for the property holders to go to the City Auditor's office within thirty days after the assessment ordinance is enacted, and sign a waiver of all defenses to the collection of the special taxes before this can be done, and unless done within thirty days after the assessment ordinance is enacted, this right is lost by the property holders.

The assessing ordinance for Fountain avenue property will be presented to the General Council at its next meeting, July 18, 1910.

Reelfoot Shipped Home.
Reelfoot, the little pacer known to thousands has been shipped to his home in Golconda, Ill., where his owner, Harry Moye, will give the horse a long rest before starting him in another race. Dr. R. B. Fisher accompanied Reelfoot home. It is doubtful if Reelfoot will race again this season although the little claybank is recovering rapidly from his serious illness that prevented him racing this month.

WHITE PLAGUE CLAIMS VICTIM.

Lingering in a comatose condition for several hours, John R. Puryear died at his home, 806 Broadway, at 6 o'clock Sunday morning. Death was attributed to bladder trouble which developed into uremic poisoning.

Mr. Puryear was taken ill Sunday, July 10, and remained out of bed as long as possible. His health had been failing for several months, but he held on with remarkable perseverance. His death was generally a shock as only a few of his close friends were aware of his critical illness.

The body was taken to the First Baptist church at 3 o'clock this afternoon and will lie in state until 4:30 o'clock, when the funeral services will be conducted by the Rev. M. E. Dodd, pastor of the church, assisted by the Rev. Calvin M. Thompson, of Hopkinsville, former pastor for the church here. Burial will be in Oak Grove cemetery.

The pallbearers are: Honorary-Judge James Campbell, Sr., Judge E. W. Bagby, Judge J. K. Hendrick, Major J. H. Ashcraft, Captain James Koger and Messrs. Henry Hughes and Ed H. Covington. Active—Mr. R. L. Eley, Dr. J. T. Reddick, Col. Joe E. Potter, W. E. Covington, Herman Graham and M. Miller.

Out of respect to the memory of Mr. Puryear the flag on the custom house was placed at half-mast and his office on the second floor is closed today. Many telegrams of sympathy from Mr. Puryear's many friends were received today by the family.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Eliza M. Puryear, three daughters and two sons, who are: Mrs. John H. Hugg, Misses Courtile and Letitia Puryear, of Paducah; Mr. Roseo Puryear, of Seattle, Wash. He also leaves two sisters, Mrs. Helen Nevill and Miss Eliza Puryear, of Arlington, Ky., and one brother, Mr. T. J. Puryear, of Corsicana, Tex.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Purcell, of St. Louis, arrived last evening. Mrs. Purcell is a sister of Mrs. Puryear.

Surviving here are her husband, her mother, Mrs. Alice Overstreet, one son, Herbert, and one sister, Mrs. Curtis Lapscott, of Memphis, Tenn.

Accepts New Place Under State Has Been Efficient Official.

To accept a position on the Kentucky state board of fire insurance writers, Mr. W. J. McPherson, who has been strict in the enforcement of the city ordinances regarding the wiring of buildings. The fact that the number of fires resulting from defective wiring has decreased to a number that is insignificant, is a silent recommendation of the ability of Mr. McPherson. Quiet and unassuming Mr. McPherson has won a host of friends in the city. W. J. Gildorf, a member of the state board, formerly was city electrical inspector. Mrs. McPherson will go to Lexington in a short time to meet her husband.

The value of the stamp collection of the postal department is modestly placed at $200,000, but it would bring many times that if placed on the market for sale.
